

Graduate School of Letters / Faculty of Letters
Hokkaido University

More Information about
the Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University:
<https://www.let.hokudai.ac.jp/en/>

Hokkaido Summer Institute

2018

June – August 2018 at Hokkaido University, Sapporo, Japan

Summer Courses offered by the
Graduate School of Letters/Faculty of Letters

You can apply online from
February 1~28, 2018!

For more information:
<https://hokkaidosummerinstitute.oia.hokudai.ac.jp/>

*Check the HSI website with this QR code!

Experience an Academic Summer at Hokkaido University

U2 Social Ecology Principles of Invasion Ecology

For Undergraduate Students

June 18 – June 22

The course will cover how plants and animals become invasive, the economic, social and environmental damage they cause, and the population dynamics of invasion. This will include examples from Japan, New Zealand and around the world.

AI GLEN

Researcher, Landcare Research (Wildlife Ecology & Management), New Zealand

Tohru IKEDA

Professor, Department of Regional Sciences, Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

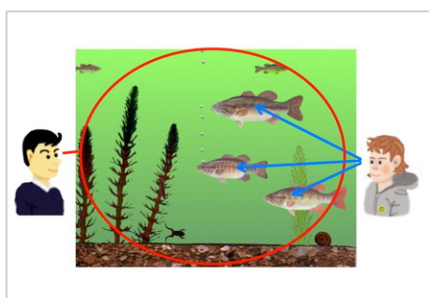

AI GLEN

U5 Cultural Psychology Frontiers in Cultural Psychology 2018

For Undergraduate Students

July 11 – July 13

This course presents an introduction to a number of topics in experimental cultural psychology, as well as research relevant to some of the major problems in this field.

Takahiko MASUDA

Associate Professor, Department of Psychology, University of Alberta, Canada

Masaki YUKI

Professor, Department of Behavioral Science, Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

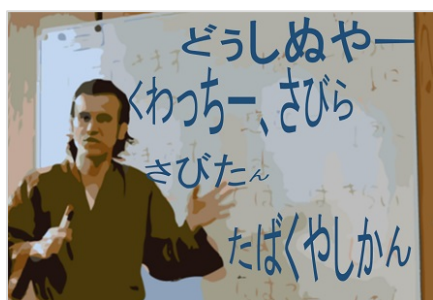

Takahiko MASUDA

U14 Seminar in Sociology Sociology of Language: Language and Wellbeing in Japan

For Undergraduate Students

Aug. 6 – Aug. 9

The sociology of language looks at social phenomena interrelated with questions of language. In this course, we focus on the role of language in the modernization of Japan. We learn that modernity has an empowering and an oppressive side.

Patrick HEINRICH

Associate Professor, Department of Asian and North African Studies, Ca' Foscari University of Venice, Italy

Carola HOMMERICH

Associate Professor, Department of Sociology, Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

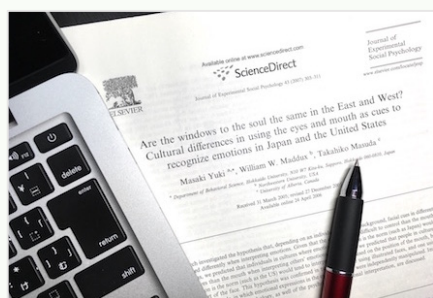

Patrick HEINRICH

G27 Academic Paper-Writing Workshop for Cultural and Social Psychological Journals 2018

For Graduate Students

July 8 - July 10

This course is designed to improve psychology graduate students' English writing skills for academic papers.

Takahiko MASUDA

Associate Professor, Department of Psychology, University of Alberta, Canada

Masaki YUKI

Professor, Department of Behavioral Science, Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

Takahiko MASUDA

8 Courses offered by the Graduate School of Letters/Faculty of Letters

- Collaboration with world-leading researchers and HU faculty members
- Special programs you can experience only in Sapporo
- Spend a pleasant and comfortable summer in Hokkaido
- Tuition Fee is Free for students of HU's partner institutions

G73 Ethics Self in Phenomenology and Japanese Philosophy

For Graduate Students

Aug. 1 – Aug. 7

The aim of this seminar is to investigate different conceptions of the "self" in the writings of Husserl, Heidegger, Nishida, and Tanabe in order to address the questions: "What is self? How can we obtain a better understanding of ourselves?"

Nicolas DE WARREN Associate Professor,
Pennsylvania State University, USA

Shigeru TAGUCHI Associate Professor, Department of Ethics and Applied
Ethics, Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

Ching-yuen CHEUNG Lecturer, Department of Japanese Studies,
Chinese University of Hong Kong, China

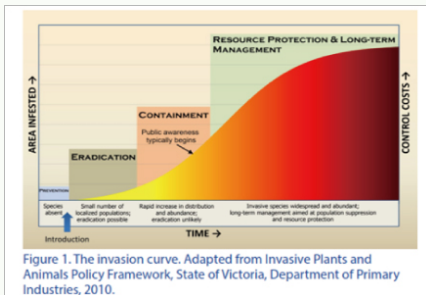

Nicolas DE WARREN

G81 Regional Sciences General Theory of Invasive Alien Species Management

For Graduate Students

Aug. 6 – Aug. 10

The course will cover principles, legislation, control tools and technologies, and strategies for controlling and eradicating Invasive Alien Species (IAS), illustrated with examples of management from Japan, New Zealand and around the world.

Phil COWAN Research Associate, Landcare Research
(Wildlife Ecology & Management), New Zealand

Tohru IKEDA Professor, Department of Regional Sciences,
Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

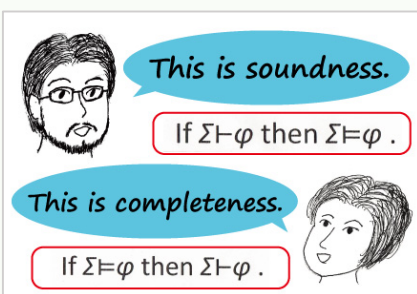

Phil COWAN

G93 Logic Introduction to Logic

For Graduate Students

Aug. 20 – Aug. 24

Logic is a basic tool for evaluating a reasoning. A given reasoning may be evaluated in terms of truth of a sentence or correctness of the use of logical vocabulary. From these two perspectives, this course provides basics of propositional, first-order and modal logics.

Tomoyuki YAMADA Professor, Department of Philosophy,
Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

Katsuhiko SANO Associate Professor, Department of Philosophy,
Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

Yasushi NOMURA Assistant Professor, Department of Philosophy,
Graduate School of Letters, Hokkaido University

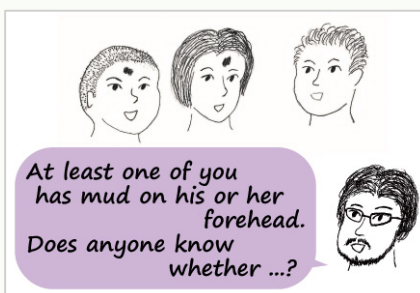

Tomoyuki YAMADA

G102 Contemporary Philosophy Dynamic Epistemic Logic and its Applications

For Graduate Students

Aug. 27 – Aug. 31

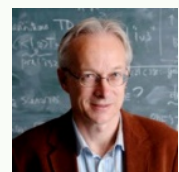

Dynamic epistemic logic deals with dynamic changes in the cognitive states of agents brought about by their interactions with others and/or their environment. We discuss the model updating techniques that make this possible, the resulting logics, and their applications to other branches of logic.

Johan VAN BENTHEM Professor, Department of Philosophy, Stanford Univ., USA
University Professor emeritus of pure and applied logic,
University of Amsterdam, Netherlands

Jeremy M. SELIGMAN Senior Lecturer, Faculty of Arts, School of Humanities,
the University of Auckland, New Zealand

Tomoyuki YAMADA, Katsuhiko SANO, Yasushi NOMURA

Hokkaido University

Johan VAN BENTHEM